17 KILLED AT SCHOOL

‘No words’:
Horror as students and adults die in a barrage of bullets

By Audra D.S. Burch and Patricia Mazzei
The New York Times

PARKLAND, FLA. » A heavily armed young man barged into his former high school about an hour northwest of Miami on Wednesday, opening fire on terrified students and teachers and leaving a death toll of 17 that could rise even higher, authorities said.

Students huddled in horror in their classrooms, with some of them training their cellphones on the carnage, capturing sprawled bodies, screams and gunfire that began with a few shots and then continued with more and more. The dead included students and adults, some of whom were shot outside the school and others inside the sprawling three-story building.

The gunman, armed with a semi-automatic AR-15 rifle, was identified as Nikolas Cruz, 19, who had been expelled from the school, authorities said. He began his shooting rampage outside Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in this suburban neighborhood shortly before dismissal time around 2:40 p.m. He then made his way inside and proceeded down hallways he knew well, firing at students and teachers who were scurrying for cover, the authorities said.

“Oh my God! Oh my God!” one student yelled over and over in one video circulating on social media, as more than 40 gunshots boomed in the background.

By the end of the rampage, Cruz had killed 12 people inside the school and three outside it, including someone standing on a street corner, Broward County Sheriff Scott Israel said. Two more

Over 100 nabbed in immigration sweep

By Elizabeth Chou and Alejandra Molina

Federal immigration officials said Wednesday they have arrested more than 100 people who are in violation of immigration laws as part of an ongoing operation in the Los Angeles area that began Sunday.

U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement spokeswoman Sarah Rodriguez said their Los Angeles-area team is targeting about 400 people across the seven counties they cover.

ICE officials said in a statement that they are focusing on “individuals who pose a threat to national security, public safety and border security.”

“This means that, ideally, we are working with local police and county jails to identify public safety threats in their custody, who are also in the country illegally, for deportation,” the agency said in a statement.

They added that in “uncooperative jurisdictions” such as Los Angeles, they are being forced to “focus additional resources to conduct at-large arrests in the community, putting officers, the general public and the aliens at risk and

Pesticide-tainted Mexican nopales are found at store

Love eating the Mexican cactus known as nopales? Be careful where you buy them.

State officials Wednesday warned Californians not to eat nopales imported from Mexico and sold at specific retail and wholesale locations, including Stater Bros. stores, after inspectors discovered unapproved pesticides that can cause poisoning, neurotoxicity and permanent nerve damage.

Routine samples taken from Jan. 23 to 29 found contaminated Opuntia ficus-indica, or nopal cactus paddles, at the Stater Bros. Distribution

Center in San Bernardino — the headquarters distribution point for 171 stores throughout Southern California, state health officials said.

The produce was packaged under the names Mexpogroup Fresh Produce, Aramburo or Los Tres Huastecos, the release said.

Washing or peeling tainted cactus won’t make it safe to eat, officials said, so anyone who has purchased these products recently should throw them away or return them to the store, and anyone who’s felt ill after eating them should see a health care provider. No illnesses from the cactus have been reported to date.
